The royal descent of this ancient clan can be traced to remote antiquity, Gregor Garubh, or "The Stout," having fought under King Duncan I. In the early part of the 17th century there were feuds between numerous clans, the Mac Gregors being persecuted with such fury that any person might mutilate or slay them with impunity. In this situation they continued till they were courted to join the Solemn League and Covenant, upon promises of future friendship; but they declared, "That as they bore the crown on the point of their swords, they would not fail to use the latter in support of the former." They are the only instance of a race being forbidden to bear their family name, which was first proscribed by James VI., owing to treachery and misrepresentation. They were restored by Charles II., 1663, to their estates, and permitted to bear their own name. In the reign of William and Mary the law of proscription was again revived, and continued in force until its repeal in 1774. The name was not, however, restored till a royal license to resume it was obtained by Sir John Murray (properly Mac Gregor), 1822.

The family of Macnaghten is of great antiquity in the Western Highlands. In 1267, Alexander III. granted to Gillichrist Macnaghten and his heirs the custody of the castle and island of Frechlan, on condition that he should rebuild it, and keep it fit for the reception of the king whenever he should visit it. His great-grandson Duncan, a faithful partisan of the cause of King Duncan, was one of the band that accompanied James Douglas in his attempt to deposit the heart of Robert Bruce at Jerusalem. The 1st baronet, Sir Francis, a Judge of the Supreme Court of Madras 1809-15, and of Calcutta 1815-25, assumed the additional surname and arms of Workman by royal license 1809.

A baronetcy for services during the civil war was conferred by Charles II. on Sir Thomas Malet, of Poyntington, who died before the patent passed the great seal; he was one of the Judges sent to the Tower by Oliver Cromwell, from the Court at Maidstone, for refusing to grant a summons against a clergyman who would not give up using the "Book of Common Prayer." The 1st baronet, Sir Charles Warre Malet, was created a baronet for distinguished diplomatic services in India, where he was long resident at the Court of the Sovereign of the Maharratta empire, and was acting Governor of Bombay Presidency. This family is lineally descended in the male line from Walter (third son of Walter, Lord High Steward of Scotland), who married 1258 the Countess of Menteth, and thus acquired that earldom. He left two sons, of whom both assumed the surname of Menteth, viz., Alexander, 6th Earl of Menteth, and Sir John Menteth, Lord of Arran, &c., who married Elyne, daughter of Grattney, Earl of Mar, and whose granddaughter, Janet Keith, married Robert, 1st Lord Erskine, and thus the Erskines acquired the ancient earldom of Mar. Alexander, 6th Earl of Menteth, had two sons—Allan, 7th Earl of Menteth, and Sir John Menteth of Ruskie (who died before 1333), from whom the Stuart-Menteaths trace their descent. The Stuarts, Earls of Menteth, ended in Murdoch, Duke of Albany, forfeited by James I. of Scotland. The father of the 1st baronet, the Rev. James Stuart-Menteath, assumed by sign-manual, in 1770, the additional surname of Stuart "for himself and his posterity." The 2nd baronet resumed the ancient name of Menteth, but his two youngest brothers retained the name of Menteth.

The family of Naesmyth is of remote antiquity in Tweedale. The family legend is that "in the reign of James III. of Scotland, the royal and baronial powers being nearly equal, repeated struggles took place between the nobles and the king. In one of these conflicts, the Douglas partisans having been victorious, an ancestor of the Naesmyths who fought under the royal standard sought refuge in a neighbouring smithy, and the smith disguised him as his hammersman. The Douglas pursuers, entering the smithy, observed with suspicion the disguised hammersman, who in his agitation struck a false blow with the sledge-hammer, whereupon one of the pursuers rushed at him, calling out, 'Ye're nae smith'; the disguised hammersman however overpowered his assailant, whilst the smith, armed with a red-hot iron bar, rallied the king's followers, headed by Naesmyth, and regained the day. The King thereupon knighted the Naesmyth, and bestowed upon him a grant of lands with armorial bearings and motto, "Not by knavery, but by bravery." James Naesmyth, inventor of the steam hammer, is lineally descended from Naesmyth of Posso. The 1st baronet, an eminent lawyer, was known as "The Deil o' Dawick," and the 2nd baronet sat as M.P. for Peeblesshire.

The ancestors of this family were established for many generations at Montauban, in Languedoc, being ennobled by patent 1547. On the revocation of the "Edict of Nantes," Samuel de Péchels and his family were the objects of persecution, and after suffering extreme cruelties, M. Péchels was shipped with felons for the West Indies, whence he escaped to Ireland. His two daughters, who had been taken from him, were placed in a convent and brought up as Catholics; they afterwards obtained a grant of all their father's lands, by virtue of a letter from Louis XIV. His son, Jacob, afterwards spelt the name Pechell, and the patent of baronetcy was so made out. Sir Thomas, 2nd baronet, assumed in 1801 the additional surname of Brooke, by royal sign-manua, for himself and his issue. The 4th baronet was a Vice-Adm., and sometime M.P. for Brighton (L).

This family is stated to be descended from Edwal, Lord of Penfro, who married Alfwyna, granddaughter of Alfred the Great, and had issue, William, styled "de Perot," from his castle in Armorica. His grandson returned to England with William I., and founded N. and S. Perrott in Somersetshire. From him sprung Sir John Perrott, K.B., Lord-Lieut. of Ireland, temp. Elizabeth, and other knights, who defended their castles in the cause of Charles I. Sir James Perrott expended his fortune in redeeming British slaves in Barbary, and Sir Richard, great-grandfather of the present baronet, having won distinction under Frederick the Great of Prussia, suffered great loss of property during the Wilkes Riots for bringing up a loyal address to the King from the borough of Flint, for which he received an autograph letter of thanks from the Prince of Wales. The patent of baronetcy which is stated to have been granted to the 1st baronet, with limitation to his nephew, has not been registered at the College of Arms. A royal warrant, dated Jan. 3rd, 1757, under sign-manual and privy seal, and countersigned by the Sec. of State, gave to the 2nd baronet the precedence of a baronet from 1716, the assumed date of the patent.

This is a branch of the ancient Derbyshire family of Pole, many members of which have distinguished themselves in the field, notably Sir John Chandos, K.G., chief commander at Cressy and at Poitiers, and German Pole, who commanded in Ireland, and served against the Armada. Millicent, daughter of Charles Pole, Esq., of Holtcroft, married Charles Van-Notten, Esq., who assumed the name of Pole, and was created a baronet. This gentleman was a descendant of Henry Van-Notten, ennobled 1499 by the Emperor Maximilian, and whose only son Charles received from Charles V. the titles of Lord of Ath and Van-der-Notten, and Chatellaine of Alost. The 3rd baronet assumed in 1853, by royal license, the additional and original paternal name of Van-Notten.

The Rich's were originally of Hampshire. In 1284, John le Rich, of Rich Place, Hants, flourished; his great-grandson, Richard Rich, an opulent mercer of London, was sheriff of that city, 1441; his great-grandson, Sir Richard Rich, Solicitor-Gen. to Henry VIII., was, upon the accession of Edward VI., created in Feb. 1547 Baron Rich, of Leeze, co. Essex, and in Nov. of that year was constituted Lord High Chancellor of England, and in 1564 founded a Grammar School at Felstead in Essex; his great-grandson, Robert Rich, P.C., 2nd Earl of Warwick, a very distinguished personage during the Civil War, was Lord High Admiral of England, and Lord Lieut. of Norfolk and Essex; the Long Parliament conferred upon him the exceptional honour of voting that he should be created a Duke, and he would have been promoted to that dignity had the treaty between Charles I. and the Parliament been completed. The Earl's younger brother, Sir Henry, K.G. (owner of Holland House, Kensington), the most accomplished courtier of his time, having in 1622 been created Baron Kensington, was successively employed to negotiate a marriage between Prince Charles (afterwards Charles I.) and the Spanish Infanta, and to sound the French Court regarding a consort for the Prince: in 1624, he was advanced to the dignity of Earl of Holland; he subsequently took up arms for the Royal Cause, for which in 1649 he suffered decapitation before the gates of Westminster Hall. The Earldoms of Warwick and Holland became united in 1673, and in 1759 they expired. Charles, 4th son of Sir Edward Rich, 3rd son of the 2nd Baron Rich, was created a baronet in 1675, which title passed by special limitation to his son-in-law, Robert Rich, a Lord of the Admiralty, and M.P. for Dunwich, temp. William III.; his 2nd son, Field Marshal Sir Robert, the 4th baronet, was successively M.P. for Dunwich, Beralston, and St. Ives; Col. 4th Dragoons, and Governor of Chelsea Hospital; he died 1768, and was succeeded by his son, Sir Robert, 5th baronet, at whose death in 1785 the baronetcy expired, and the estates devolved upon his only daughter Mary Frances, wife of the Rev. Charles Bostock, LL.D. (descended from Sir Osmer de Bostock, temp., William I.), of Shirley House, Hants, who in 1790 assumed, by royal license, the surname and arms of Rich, and was in 1791 created a baronet.

The former baronetcy of 1620, belonging to this old Kentish family, originally called Rookehurst and later Roobertes, became apparently extinct on the demise in 1745 of Sir Walter, 6th baronet, who left an only daughter, Jane, who married the 3rd Duke of St. Albans. About 1775 the Duchess discovered that the descendants of Thomas, second son of the 1st baronet, who had emigrated to Ireland in 1631, were in existence and seated at Britfieldstown, Roberts' Cove, co. Cork; and upon their descent being proved the title was assumed by the then head of that branch, Randal, and it was confirmed to his eldest son Thomas (but not antedated) in 1809. The ancient property of Glassenbury, Cranbrook, Kent, which had then been in the direct line for nearly seven centuries, was left by the Duchess of St. Albans to the second son of this Sir Thomas, viz., Col. Thomas Walton Roberts, J.P. (High Sheriff of Kent 1879), who d. 1882.

This family is descended from Peter de Stapleleigh, Lord of Stapleleigh in Cheshire, temp. Edward I., a branch of which settled at Framfield in Sussex. Col. Anthony Stapley, of Framfield, M.P. for Sussex, Councillor of State, Vice-Adm. for Sussex, Gov. of Chichester, etc., signed Charles I.'s death warrant; he was attainted, and his estates forfeited. His son John, M.P. for Sussex, induced by his uncle the Earl of Norwich, joined in a plot for restoring Charles II., and having raised a troop of 600 horse was, on his restoration, created a Baronet, and died in 1701, leaving ten children, of whom Herbert, M.P., died, leaving four sons under age. The Baronetcy, which was conferred on heirs male whatsoever, is claimed and assumed by Harry (ante), grandson of Robert Stapley, of Framfield, who was grandson of Sir John, de jure 2nd Bart. (son of Herbert, who being under age, and in consequence of his pecuniary resources, did not assume the title). There is a superstitution in the family that an evil influence hangs over them in consequence of their ancestor Anthony Stapley's participation in the rebellion.

Sir George, the 3rd baronet, was fined £1,460 for his loyalty to Charles I. He surrendered his father's patent of creation, and had a new one granted to himself, with remainder to his second son, John, and his heirs male, intending thereby to exclude his first son. The elder son, however, on his father's decease, claimed and enjoyed the baronetcy created by the original patent, so that there were two baronetries in the family till on the death (without issue) of Sir John, 6th baronet under the old creation, they became united in Sir John, 3rd baronet of the new. The 11th baronet, having been for twenty years Physician to the Northampton Infirmary, took Holy Orders, and subsequently became an eminent preacher.

The family of Tichborne, which was of great importance in Hampshire before the Conquest, derives its name from the river Itchen, at the head of which it had estates; hence it was called De Itchenborne, since corrupted into Tichborne. Sir John de Tichborne, Knt., Sheriff of Southampton, on hearing of the death of Queen Elizabeth, immediately repaired to Winchester, and there proclaimed King James VI. (of Scotland) as King of England. In 1621 he was created a baronet, the honor of knighthood having been previously conferred upon three of his sons, while his fourth son, Henry, was subsequently knighted. Sir Henry, the 3rd baronet, hazarded his life in defence of Charles I. in several enterprises, and his estates were sequestered by the Parliamentarians. After the Restoration he was successively Lieut. of the New Forest and Lieut. of Ordnance. The 9th baronet assumed the additional surname of Doughty. In 1869 the title and estates of the 12th baronet were claimed by a person who asserted himself to be Roger, eldest son of Sir James, 10th baronet. The family, believing that Roger had been lost at sea, refused to acknowledge the claimant, who thereupon became plaintiff in the celebrated cause of Tichborne v. Lushington. After a trial, in 1872, which lasted several months, the claimant elected to be nonsuited, and the presiding judge committed him to prison for perjury. For this offence he was indicted: and at the memorable trial at bar, which lasted from May 1873 till Feb. 1874, he was found to be Arthur Orton, and not Roger Tichborne, and sentenced to fourteen years' penal servitude.

The name of this family is supposed to be derived either from Walsham le Willows in Suffolk, or Walsham St. Mary in Norfolk, in both of which counties, as in Cambridgeshire, the Walshams were of note, and often of knightly rank, from the end of the 11th to the beginning of the 18th century. The Walshams of Knill represent a branch that settled in Radnorshire about 400 years ago, through the marriage of John Walsham with Mary, granddaughter and heiress of Sir Jenkin Harvey of Llanvair, Knight. From this marriage lineally descended John Walsham, who married Barbara, granddaughter and heiress of John Knill, Esq., of Knill Court, M.P. for Radnor, temp. Philip and Mary, and was the direct ancestor, in the ninth degree, of the present baronet. The 1st baronet received his baronetcy as being the eldest coheir and representative of Gen. Sir Thomas Morgan, Bart., whose title, created 1660, became extinct on his death, 1768.

The 1st baronet, Sir Matthew Wood, born 1767, was the son of a serge manufacturer, of Tiverton, and at eleven years of age worked in his father's factory. At fourteen he was apprenticed to Mr. Newton, druggist, at Exeter. After serving seven years, he became a traveller in the drug trade, and subsequently established himself in London as a chemist. He afterwards became a hop-merchant, and was chosen Alderman, served as a Sheriff, and in the year of the Peace, 1815, was elected Lord Mayor of London, to which office he was re-elected the following year. He also sat as M.P. for London (L) 1816-43. During his mayoralty he was bold and fearless. On one occasion, after a lawless mob had shot a man on Snow Hill, and were approaching the Exchange, he, with only seven others, rushed through that building, and held the rioters in check, while he arrested several of the ringleaders. He took an active part in the cause of Queen Caroline: he accompanied her through Calais and Dover, on her journey to London in 1820, and placed his house in South Audley Street at her disposal. His fortune was, after much litigation, augmented on the death of Jemmy Wood, the banker, of Gloucester, to the extent of £250,000. Among these possessions was the estate of Hatherley Court, in Gloucestershire, a fine old ivy-mantled mansion, and from its name his second son, William Page, who was Lord High Chancellor 1868-72, selected his title.

FORMAL MODES OF ADDRESSING PERSONS OF TITLE.

CORRECTNESS in addressing a person of title, or one holding high office, can only be attained by first discovering what is his, or her, precise social rank, or his official position. As the name of every individual referred to in the two classes indicated appears in Debrett's Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, and Companionship, there will be no difficulty in obtaining the requisite information. It must always be remembered that clerical, naval, and military prefixes are written before other titles, that initials indicative of distinction are written after the title or name, and that a High Officer of State, or an official holding an important office, should be addressed by his official title when the communication refers to official business.

* * A Widow who re-marries loses any title or precedence she gained by her previous marriage. From this rule there is not any exception. Society, however, from pure motives of courtesy, sanctions the retention of former rank, and with one exception permits ladies who have re-married to be addressed as though their titled husbands were living. The exception is that of the widow of an Honourable, who is not permitted even by courtesy to retain after re-marriage the prefix gained through her first husband. But, officially, a widow who re-marries is not recognised as having any claim to bear the title of her deceased husband, e.g. :—at a coronation, or other State ceremonial, the widow of a peer would not be summoned as a peeress if she had subsequently married a commoner; and, if having espoused a peer of lesser degree than her former husband, she would only be recognised by the rank acquired by her last marriage.

Divorced Ladies.—Immediately a lady is divorced she loses any title, or precedence, she gained by marriage, and resumes her maiden surname and precedence with the prefix of "Mrs." if the daughter of a commoner. A divorced peeress, however, asserts her right to use the title she acquired by marriage. Such claim is assumptive and worthless, and ought not to be recognised.

Dowager, Lady, is addressed according to her rank. Immediately a peer, or a baronet, marries, the widow of the previous incumbent of the title becomes "Dowager." This prefix, however, is not generally appreciated, and during the last fifteen years it has been very much less used than formerly. It is well that the change is rapidly taking place, because confusion constantly occurs when there are two or more "Dowagers" in the same family, unless, according to their seniority, they be respectively termed "Dowager Dowager," or "Dowager Dowager Dowager." It is therefore recommended that each Dowager be addressed by her Christian name, as, "The Right Hon. [Mary], Countess of —" &c., &c. if a peeress; or, as "Ellen, Lady —," if a Baronet's widow. But the word "Dowager" should never be used except the lady addressed is either mother, or grandmother, of the present peer or baronet.

Duchess.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "To Her Grace, the Duchess of —." Commencement, "Madam," Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, Madam, Your Grace's most humble and most obedient Servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "Your Grace." [See also "Duke's Widow," and for "Duchess of the Blood Royal," see "Princess,"]

Duke. — LETTERS. — Superscription, "To His Grace, the Duke of —." Commencement, "My Lord Duke," Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, my Lord Duke, Your Grace's most devoted and most obedient Servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "Your Grace." [For "Duke of the Blood Royal," see "Prince,"]

Duke's Daughter.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "The Rt. Hon. Lady [Jane]

—, or, less formally, "The Lady [Henrietta] —," Commencement, "Madam," Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, Madam, Your Ladyship's most obedient and humble Servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "My Lady," or, "Your Ladyship."

If the daughter of a Duke marry a Peer she is addressed according to the rank of her husband, but if she marry the eldest son of an Earl she is not addressed by the courtesy title of her husband, but in his surname, as "The Lady [Mary] —," occasionally, however, the husband's courtesy title is assumed with the prefix of Lady [Anne] —.

Duke's Younger Son.—LETTERS.—Superscription, "The Rt. Hon. Lord [Albert] —," or, "The Lord [Francis] —," Commencement, "My Lord," Conclusion, "I have the honour to be, my Lord, Your Lordship's most obedient and humble Servant." PERSONAL ADDRESS, "My Lord," or, "Your Lordship."

OPINION OF THE PRESS.

“All the more serious accidents to ladies have been caused from their inability to clear the skirt from the pommel in a fall. No such difficulty could occur with Mr. Shingleton's patent; hence it is to be hoped it may be universally adopted.”

CAUTION.—Safety Combination Riding Skirts which are attached to the leg seams and back seam of breeches or trousers should bear label with patent number on it, without which, is an infringement on W. SHINGLETON'S PATENT.

IMPORTANT TESTIMONIAL FROM

DR. MATTHEWS, Dereham Road, Norwich.

Dereham Road, Norwich, June 13th, 1892.

Gentlemen,—You have been kind enough to send me several free orders for your "Wincarnis," and it has given much relief to several who were in a dying state—they could take the "Wincarnis" when everything else was rejected. I am now begging the favour of asking you if you can do a work of charity in giving a poor dying man some of your "Wincarnis." It has kept him up for some weeks. He is suffering from an internal cancer. His means are all gone. Friends and his family have purchased two large bottles weekly—they cannot afford him more. He has had the most expensive wines, but nothing suits him like the "Wincarnis." The case is urgent. The gentleman has filled an important position in this county, but his means are gone.

Messrs. Coleman &amp; Co. Limited.

Yours faithfully

W. MATTHEWS.
